8th Fighter Wing moves closer to reorganizing command structure

By 1st Lt. Ben Frankenfield
8th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Major group and squadron changes will be made to the wing's chain of command structure as part of an Air Force-wide initiative to enhance the way the Wolf Pack delivers air power between this summer and October.

Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. John Jumper directed April 22 that all Air Force active duty, Reserve and Air National Guard wings adopt the new standard wing structure to enhance the service's warfighting capabilities.

"After careful deliberations with major command commanders, we reached a decision on a new wing organizational structure that will standardize operations across the Air Force," Jumper said.

Some of the changes include:

- The 8th Logistics Group renamed the 8th Maintenance Group
- 8th Operations Group maintenance functions moving to the 8th MXG
- A new squadron created under the 8th MXG called the 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron
- The 8th Support Group renamed the 8th Mission Support Squadron

Nine Kunsan captains to be promoted to O-4

Nine Wolf Pack captains found out Thursday they will be promoted to major.

- Andrew Bates, 8th Civil Engineer Squadron
- Eugene Cassingham, 35th Fighter Squadron
- Erik Drake, 80th Fighter Squadron
- Simon Izaguirre Jr., 8th Maintenance Squadron
- Richard Smith, 8th Logistics Support Squadron
- Christopher Wilkowski (PCS'd)
- Alan Nolan (PCS'd)
- Samuel Hinote (PCS'd)
- Eric Werner, 8th Fighter Wing

2,175 captains Air Force wide were promoted. The entire list is posted on the Air Force Personnel Center's Web site, at <http://www.afpc.af.mil/>

The major's board convened from Feb. 19 to March 1 to consider 3,090 potential promotees.

Some officers affected by Stop-Loss were given the opportunity to have their records reviewed by the regularly scheduled May 6 special selection board.

Selection statistics in-the-promotion zone for major include:

- Line – 1,814 officers selected from 2,048 considered for an 88.6-percent select rate;
- JAG – 54 officers selected from 62 considered for an 87.1-percent rate;
- NC – 92 officers selected from 125 considered for a 73.6-percent rate;
- MSC – 35 officers selected from 39 considered for an 89.7-percent rate; and
- BSC – 130 officers selected from 148 considered for an 87.8-percent rate.

Selection statistics above-the-promotion zone for major include:

- Line – 30 officers selected from 558 considered for a 5.4-percent select rate;
- JAG – Five officers selected from 10 considered for a 50-percent rate;
- NC – Eight officers selected from 72 considered for an 11.1-percent rate;
- MSC – Three officers selected from eight considered for a 37.5-percent rate; and
- BSC – Four officers selected from 20 considered for a 20-percent rate.

Family Support Center offers information on touring Korea

By Larry Kurzer
Kunsan Family Support Center

Bored sitting at home with nothing to do on the weekend? It's too easy in a foreign country to get into the "cable tv" habit when you're shy about venturing outside the base and exploring your local area.

Traveling around the Korean peninsula can be an enriching experience and is easy when you visit the relocation office at the Kunsan Family Support Center. There you will find maps and local information on taking buses, trains, and planes.

For many of us who come to Kunsan it might be the first time in years we've been without a car and can't imagine any other way of getting around town. But there's a nice surprise awaiting you here – the local transportation system. You'll find that buses are a cheap and reliable mode of transportation that can take you just about anywhere, from cosmopolitan Seoul to the natural beauty along the coasts and countryside.

In Kunsan City, you will find local buses that will take you from the main gate to Eunpa Lake Resort where you can rent a paddle boat, visit Wolmyeong Park for a nice hike, or tour the downtown shopping area for souvenirs.

To venture outside the city and points all over Korea, visit one of the three downtown bus terminals located on the same block next to each other. There you will find two kinds of bus terminals: express and intercity. The express bus terminal (bus terminal to the left) with buses every 15-20 minutes to Seoul, as low as 16,200 Won, makes for an easy weekend getaway. Arriving at the express bus terminal in Seoul in just three hours, tell a taxi driver "meegoon pooday kajuseyo," and you can reach Yongsan Army Garrison for about 2,500 Won.

The middle bus terminal will take you to Chonju every 10 minutes and Iksan every seven minutes. Chonju, the capital of our province, is both modern and traditional. Iksan, the jewelry capital of Korea, is a great place to shop for gifts.

The bus terminal farthest to the right will take you to Taejon and Kwanju. Taejon is the "science city" in Korea because of its emphasis on research and development. Check out its World Science Expo with futuristic exhibits. Kwanju is the "art" center in Korea with its emphasis on theatre and the arts.

For members of the Kunsan community interested in finding a companion to travel with, the Family Support Center is taking names for a data base called Travel Buddies. Call 762-5385 for more information.

Weekend day trips once a month around the local area are also in the works. These will introduce newcomers to local scenery and culture. There's no fee for the trips other than the cost of using public transportation, paying admission fees for attractions, and the cost of lunch and souvenirs. Upcoming trips should include Daejeon, Kwanju, Seoul and Andong. The goal is to help newcomers learn the local transportation system and train them so they can go out and tour the peninsula.

Call 782-5644 or stop by the Family Support Center for more assistance.

r The 8th Supply Squadron and 8th Transportation Squadron moving under the 8th MSG.

"We are targeting to make the initial moves in July," said Maj. Ricky Milligan, 8th Logistics Support Squadron commander and LG team leader for the wing's reorganization.

"Most of it will be changes on paper and realignment of the chain of command," he added.

"It's not going to affect the enlisted side that much," said Chief Master Sgt. Don Jordan, 8th Logistics Group chief enlisted manager.

"There will be some moves from one location to another, but [the enlisted] are still going to be doing the same jobs," he said.

Milligan said there would be some facility moves to consolidate the new groups.

The 8th Operations Support Squadron, 8th OG Quality Assurance, and the 8th MXG will be pick-up up their furniture and moving to different buildings.

Jordan said, "One of the hardest parts is our time constraints and getting the new squadron, the 8th Aircraft Maintenance Squadron, in place by October 1."

After October, the Wolf Pack has until September 2003 to gradually change the smaller details; new hats and patches, signs on buildings, guideons, letterheads, and phone books are a few examples, said Jordan.

The largest change after October, scheduled for June 2003, will be the merging of the 8th Supply Squadron, the 8th Transportation Squadron, and the 8th LSS logistics plans flight to a new squadron called the Logistics Readiness Squadron, said Milligan.

"One of the main issues with merging squadrons is that they can only have one lineage and honors – the history and awards the unit has," said Tech Sgt. Pat Longe, 8th FW historian.

"It's still up in the air which squadron will carry their history to the 8th LRS and which squadron will have their history inactivated, in other words, 'mothballed.'"

The last wing reorganization on this scale was in 1992 said Longe.

Col. Thomas Ardern, 8th FW vice commander and project officer for the wing re-organization said, "This reorganization is going to take some work, but it the long run it's going to give focus to our groups and help us do our mission."

Commentary

It can happen ...

*Senior Airman Melinda Finholm
8th Services Squadron*

"Apparently there is nothing that cannot happen ..."

reads the autobiography of Mark Twain, 1959.

In life, we have the opportunity to make things happen.

I am going to make this remote tour to Korea be one of the most enriched cultural experiences of my life. My one-week "anniversary" in Kunsan was spent attending one of the many unique recreational opportunities Kunsan has to offer for the weekend.

The Korean-American Friendship Association joins with the Armed Forces in providing many programs; one of which is the House Visit Program. I joined with 22 different people, of varying ranks and squadrons, for our journey to Seoul at 10:15 a.m. The main topic of discussion was what gift the other had brought for the Korean host family. The popular choices were wine, alcohol, or chocolate.

The three and-a-half-hour drive was divided by a trip to a rest area that sold a variety of foods and gifts. We arrived at the Yongsan Garrison USO at 3 p.m..

The energetic Capt. Julianna Browne, who headed up the visit, divided the group into two or three people and assigned us a table.

Most of the Korean host families were there to greet us. After the fifteen-minute Korean speech given to the families about why the American Friendship Association does this program, our group headed our separate ways.

Our direction led us to the subway. It was my first time riding on a subway, and I was thrilled!

My host Max purchased the tickets, and we were on our way. Twenty-minutes later, we got off the subway and walked the rest of the way to his apartment on the fifteenth floor.

Ann greeted us at the doorway, and we met some of her neighbors as we took off our shoes to enter her home. She was very humble about accepting our gifts and the plaque provided to present their family.

We met about eight children that night; Rosa and Daniel, and their friends. Ann was sure to introduce each one. We ate a plethora of different foods.

Being new to Korean cuisine, it was all exciting to me. Sweet rice, bulgogi, spicy kimchi, fruit, bean soy sauce dip, rolling meat-in-a-leaf... all very new.

We also had a California roll and a rice drink. After dinner, the children practiced their English with us, and put on a karate demonstration. We went back to the USO and 13 of us stayed at Walker Inn, the army barracks.

The next morning, we checked out of the barracks and went our separate ways for breakfast. About thirteen of us went to the Korean War Memorial Museum. It was a very interesting tour about Korean history.

Each of us had a different experience. The host families took us to different places, had different food, came from different backgrounds. And of course, this brief summary barely touches the surface of the wonderful time we all had that weekend.

The only complaint was that it didn't last long enough! We jokingly asked if we could do this every weekend; if given the chance, most of us would. This was a rare opportunity to be invited into the home of a Korean family, invitations are usually only given to close friends and family.

When you are there, as Max said, "We Koreans say eat too much. You Americans say, 'Don't eat too much.' But we say, 'Eat too much. Eat, eat!'" They want to share with you!

How often do opportunities like this come along? Embrace this glimpse into another culture while we are here, for good or bad. I want a full, rich life with no regrets of not doing something I had the chance to do.

What kind of life to you want?

Wolf Pack Police Blotter

June 15

9 p.m.

SOFA Incident: A Korean national notified the control center of two Foxtrot Battery Army privates being held at the Korean National Police Station.

8th Security Forces members were dispatched to the police station to gather further information and detain the Army privates.

The Army members were found to have a bottle containing pills and some pipe filters.

The Army members were transported to the law enforcement desk and released to the Foxtrot Battery first sergeant.

11:15 p.m.

Wingman Violation: An 8th SFS airman first class notified the control center of an 80th Fighter Squadron staff sergeant he detained at the visitor center who was without a wingman.

The staff sergeant stated his friends told him he had enough to drink and to return to the base, but his friends were not coming back at that time.

Security forces transported the staff sergeant to the law enforcement desk for further processing.

Jun 18

4 p.m.

Missing Personal Property: An 8th Civil Engineer Squadron master sergeant notified the control center Monday of his missing personal property he was storing at the Loring Club.

The master sergeant stated he was informed by the night manager of the Loring Club that 69 DVD videos were not in the Loring Club Cashiers Cage where they are stored.

A Loring Club employee stated that between June 8 and 10, a medium-sized black male, claiming to be a DJ, approached the cashiers' cage and pointed to the bag the DVD's were stored in.

The club employee handed him the bag at that time.

5:20 p.m.

Minor Vehicle Accident: A Korean national was traveling down 8th Street when a fire alarm at Bldg. 616 alarmed.

8th SFS members were dispatched to the scene and began directing traffic.

The 8th SFS members directed the Korean national to turn the bus he was driving around and return the other way.

While he was backing the bus he struck the fence located on 8th Street adjacent to Bldg. 616

Whose job is it? Rabid Ref asks

By the Rabid Ref

Whose responsibility is it to control bad fan conduct?

It is the responsibility of the base fitness center staff to monitor the ball field because the ball field, in effect, belongs to them

Without increased manning though, they cannot be expected to have a person there 100 percent of the time, so add it to the sweep that is performed.

With no cash box to worry about, there should not be much of a problem. Be an obvious presence.

If fans are out of order, speak up or call for backup.

It is the responsibility of the Security Forces to monitor the ball field. They are responsible for the whole base.

Again, without increased manning, they cannot be expected to have a person there 100 percent of the time, so add it to the patrol that is performed on base and be an obvious presence and speak up.

It is the responsibility of the commanders and/or commanders reps (Shirt, officer, senior NCO, etc.).

How often have you seen your squadron play ball?

Even without a problem crowd, it is your responsibility to see what the troops are up to off-duty.

I grew up in a time when you were on duty 24 hours a day. I guess that is different now.

You don't have to hold their hands every minute, but do you know anything about them, other than what you hear from the blotter or the end-of-tour medal?

Granted there have been a few people in the position to be commander's reps, or very rarely, even the commander who adds to the problem, but I would hope their peers would take the responsibility to deal with them.

It is the responsibility of the coaches and players to help with the crowds.

Sure, there are the occasional jerks who are too smart for their own good and move over to the "wrong" side, but these are few.

You only have to control the ones you know, and my bet is that you know almost all of them and even the ones not in your squadron.

I know that fan support is one key to a good game, but please let your fans know that they do not have to tear down others to build you up.

It is the responsibility of the game officials to control game conduct.

I know I will have a lot of the officials disagree with me, but this is my opinion.

We are not at Little League games, Major League ball parks, NBA stadiums, etc., we are at a military installation in a foreign nation, something else I firmly believe.

Again, I just may be in a small minority, but you cannot totally leave the military uniform on the sideline, just because you happen to be playing a sport.

I guess that also goes back to my 24-hours-a-day upbringing. I am not saying that stripes, bars, leafs, eagles, or stars should be any factor on applying the rules of the game, just that they should always be a factor in applying good order and discipline in our military environment, ever more true because of our location and how our hosts see us.

If we are given any power to control the fans, I know there might be some officials who prefer not to be put in that traditionally taboo area, and opt out of it.

I respect their option.

If I am given that power, I plan to use it. However, I must exercise judgment and use it very cautiously.

I can do that as an official and a lifelong military person, I am trained to do just that.

I also must use it only if the rest of the people fail in their responsibilities. After all, if the others are not responsible for their conduct, me having a different kind of uniform and collecting a few dollars extra does not set me apart from the rest of the people there. I can be held no more, or less, responsible than they are.

To sum it up, it is the responsibility of all of the people mentioned above, plus the rest of the fans or passers by within hearing distance. If you don't like the crudeness, the conduct, the clowns in the crowd, say so.

Tell the people doing it you don't like it that they are not displaying proper behavior in this setting, or find someone else that will exercise their responsibility.

Ask them to take care of it.

Otherwise, there is no problem. That or we are all part of the problem.

Ladies, interested in learning how to defend yourselves?
